THE WORLD BEYOND US

YOUTH RESPONDING TO CONFLICT AND CRISIS

POSTCARD

Young people are growing up in a world shaped by conflict, crisis, and rapid global change. While many of these events occur far from home, their impacts are felt everywhere - through media, migration, economics, and shared global challenges. This postcard places youth at the centre of these conversations, exploring not only how governments respond to global crises, but how young people can and should respond.

This conference invites participants to grapple with important questions: Why do countries intervene in conflicts they are not directly involved in? What responsibilities do nations have in an interconnected world? And critically, what role do young people play in responding to these issues - both now and in the future?

Whether through advocacy, informed dialogue, or community engagement, this postcard aims to empower young people to see themselves not as passive observers, but as active participants in shaping a more just and responsive world.

We are looking forward to you joining us on the call.
